Against All Odds, Official Bringing Discipline to Cairo's Chaotic Traffic

Some Illinois Doubters Won Back by President By Martin Schram

Washington Post Service HANOVER PARK, Illinois On Sunday night in this suburb of Chicago, some of President Ronald Reagan's voters came home.

Two weeks before, these middle class Republicans, Democrats and independents found their faith in the president unexpectedly shaken by his first debate with Walter F. Mondale.

That encounter had left them with doubts about Mr. Reagan's age, competence and command and with new respect for his Democratic challenger.

But after watching the second presidential debate of 1984 in the home of Susan and Michael Talbot. these Chicago suburbanites were restored to the Reagan column. These voters were among a group of 19 assembled by The Washington Post. The group was in no way a scientific sample of the electorate nationwide.

Viewed from the Talbots' family room, Mr. Reagan seemed to have performed well enough to guaran-another four years, even though his responses and his record were not without flaws.

And Mr. Mondale, after a strong beginning, seemed to put himself on automatic pilot and droned on unconvincingly. He left his sup-porters in the room disappointed and gave those leaning to Mr. Reagan no new reason to abandon their leader.

The only note of cheer for Mr. Mondate is that the gender gap cuts a wide swath through Hanover

Dian Johnson, Judy Cherry and Mary DeFranze remained solidly for Mr. Mondale — even more solidly than they were before. Their concerns about Mr. Reagan's lack of accomplishment in arms control, his "Star Wars" space defense plan and his policy to Lebanon solidified their opposition to the candidate whom their husbands were ready to rally behind on Sunday

Mr. Deasy said that he believed it "quite likely" that the problem of wine surpluses would have to be addressed by heads of state of the 10 members at their summit in Dublin in December.

Chernenko Says Soviet Must Expand Its Farmland

By Serge Schmemann New York Times Service

MOSCOW - In what diplomats judged to be a significant shift in Soviet agricultural policy, Presi-dent Kostantin U. Chernenko announced on Tuesday a vast land reclamation project that he said would greatly reduce the ravages of fickle weather on Soviet crops.

He presented the program at a one-day meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee at which he admitted a substantial shortfall in this year's grain harvest.

The meeting also raised new questions about the political lineup in the ruling Politburo. Despite speculation that the meeting would produce personnel changes, none was announced.

Diplomats noted that a speech spelling out details of the farm program was made by Prime Minister Nikolai A. Tikhonov. Agriculture has been the domain of Mikhail S. Gorbachov, the 53-year-old Politburo member who has been considcred the second-in-command behind Mr. Chernenko and as the champion of younger members of the Soviet leadership who favor

Diplomats said that Mr. Gorbachov's absence from the limelight at the meeting could suggest that he had been freed of responsibility for agriculture in light of his more im-portant role. But they also noted that no hint was given of a new agriculture secretary and that the program onlined by Mr. Chernenko seemed to contradict much of what Mr. Gorbachev had stressed in the past.

Mr. Chernenko said that under the new program, the area of irri-gated or drained lands would be increased by 50 percent by the year

He declared that this would "indisputably open up a new and ma-jor stage in raising the fertility of lands ... as a result, the country will be able to produce nearly one half of its gross crop harvest irre-spective of weather fluctuations."

The announcement was received with some surprise by diplomats who have been following Soviet agricultural policy. The thrust of that policy over the last two years, since the enactment of a broad "food program," has been to seek increased production through improved management, increased efficiency, better machinery, decentralized administration and improved incentives rather than through enormous new schemes.

Although Mr. Chernenko mentioned these, he seemed to diplomats to return to an earlier era of massive investments in land reclamation, a policy that had been criticized by economists and ecologists.

British Miners Agree to New Talks

LONDON (AP) — Britain's striking coal miners unexpectedly agreed to a new round of talks with the National Coal Board Tuesday as negotiations continued with mice foremen who have scheduled a strike that could paralyze the country's remaining working mines. The talks are to be held Thursday, the day the foremen have threatened to strike.

The negotiations will be held under the auspices of the independent'

Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, which was the host Tuesday for all the main figures in the disputes in Britain's mining industry, as well as the heads of the national labor federation, the Trades Union Congress.

Arthur Scargill, president of the National Union of Mineworkers, which has been on strike since March 12, met separately with heads of the TUC. Later in the day, Norman Willis, general secretary of the TUC, and top aides unexpectedly joined the talks between the coal board and the foremen's uinion in London

González Rejects Full NATO Inclusion

MADRID (Reuters) — Prime Minister Felipe González said Monday that Spain should remain a member of NATO, but he opposed full military integration with the alliance.

Laying down foreign and military policy goals in a speech to the parliament, Mr. González said this would be his recommendation when the government called a referendum on NATO membership before February 1986. His Socialist Party was elected two years ago with a promise to hold a vote on NATO and froze integration into the alliance's military structure when it took office. Mr. González said he beheved that Spain should not renounce its membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which it joined in 1982 "I would be against renouncing the treaty," he said. It was the first time that he had clearly spelled out his views on NATO membership.

U.S. Veterans Hurt in Philippine Fire

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) - Fire swept a hotel in the mountain city of Bagnio late Tuesday, killing at least four persons and injuring at least 44, most of them American veterans of World War II, officials at Bagnio General Hospital said. They said the injury toll was expected to rise. The cause of the fire was not immediately known. Guests leaped from windows of the four-story, government-owned Pines Hotel and others were seen slipping from rescue ropes, officials and witnesses said. All four of the dead had suffered chest injuries apparently sustained in leaping from windows. The Americans were attending a convention of World War II veterans.

The colonial-style hotel is considered the finest in Baguio, a city about 125 miles (200 kilometers) north of Manila. The resort city is the summer home of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Israel Declares Wage, Price Freeze

TEL AVIV (UPI) - Israeli officials decided Tuesday to fight the country's 800 percent annual inflation rate by freezing wages and prices Nov. 1 for at least four months, Israel radio said. The officials, who included Prime Minister Shimoo Peres, rejected an alternative plan to tie the shekel's value to the U.S. dollar.

The government will be asking manufacturers and the powerful Histadrut labor association, representing a majority of employees, to agree to the freeze. The officials acted under the dual pressures of having to deal.

with the economy and keeping the shekel as Israel's own unit of currency. The officials rejected a separate plan to stabilize the economy that would have tied the increasingly valueless shekel to the dollar. A year ago, Yoram Aridor, then the finance minister, was forced to resign within hours after proposing such a "dollarization" plan. But with the economy worsening, officials revived the idea, again unsuccessfully.

Greens Do Well in Finnish Local Vote

HELSINKI (AP) — Final municipal election totals announced on Tuesday showed the Greens and other new anti-establishment groups did; well in Helsinki and other cities while the Communists were the main losers throughout the country.

The Social Democrats lost ground but remained the country's largest party with 24.8 percent of the vote, compared to 25.5 percent in 1980. Kalevi Sorsa, the Social Democratic prime minister, said he saw "no reason for any changes in the government" resulting from the voting. Sunday and Monday.

The Conservatives won 23.0 percent, one-tenth of 1 percent more than their 22.9 percent in 1980; the Center Party took 20.2 percent, the Communists 13.9 percent, compared to 16.6 percent in 1980, the Rural Party 5.3 percent, the Swedish People's Party 5.0 percent, the Christian League 3.1 percent, the Greens 2.9 percent; the Constitutional Party 0.4 percent and others 1.4 percent.

and pledged to prosecute whoever was implicated by the citizen's panet. But if high-ranking officers are prosecuted, that could pit Mr. Marcos against the military, one of the most powerful institutions in Philpoine society and one of Mr. Marcos most loyal supporters during his 19-year rule

Yet the report by Mrs. Agrava, finding a more limited military conspiracy, seems to give President Marcos an opportunity for limiting the damage to his regime. He seized on the findings of Mrs. Agrava in a televised address Tuesday evening: "I have directed the minister of justice to take all appropriate and speedy action on the board's report without letting a day pass," the president said. "I have chosen under my discretionary powers to re-fer this case to our civil courts."

Opposition leaders were critical of the split decision by the board and charged government interfer-ence, Salvador H. Laurel, president of the United Nationalist Democratic Organization, which includes the main opposition parties, said that Mrs. Agrava rode roughshod over the majority of board members. "We see the hand of Marcos here," he said

Many, too, are skeptical of the president's pledge of speedy prose-cution, particularly of high-ranking officers close to Mr. Marcos.

Fabius to Shun French-Soviet Fete

PARIS (Reuters) -- Prime Minister Laurent Fabius has decided not to attend celebrations in Paris marking the 60th anniversary of French-Soviet diplomatic relations because of the detention of Jacques Abouchar, a French journalist, in Afghanistan, sources close to Mr. Fabius said

The French Communist Party announced that it was suspen relations with the Peoples' Democratic Party of Afghanistan until Mr.
Abouchar, sentenced to 18 years in prison for illegal entry after being captured with a group of rebels, is released.

Abdullah Keshtmand, the Afghan charge d'affaires, told a French parliamentary delegation, "Requests for immediate release are inadmissible and show a deep ignorance of existing procedures in our country. The only thing which can be obtained is a pardon pronounced by the Presidium of the Revolutionary Council."

India, Pakistan Troops Exchange Fire

NEW DELHI (Reuters) - Indian and Pakistani soldiers exchanged heavy fire on their border in Kashmir after Pakistani troops started digging trenches in a disputed zone, the Press Trust of India reported Monday.

The news agency quoted official sources in Poonch, a border town in India's Jammu and Kashmir state, as saying one house on the Indian side was badly damaged in the shooting bot that there were no civilian casualties. The sources said clashes started Oct. 18 in Poonch district's Khari area and had since spread to exchanges of small-arms fire along a 30-mile (50-kilometer) stretch of border between the Indian towns of Balakote and Bagyal.

Nicaraguan Newspaper Censored, Doesn't Print

New York Times Service MANAGUA — Nicaragua's opposition newspaper La Prensa did not appear Monday after 11 articles were consored by the government. Most concerned the announcement of an opposition presidential candidate, Virgilio Godoy Reyes, that he and his Independent Liberal Party were quitng the election campaign.

According to Pedro Joaquin Chamorro Barrios, editor of the newspaper, this marked the 14th time this year that La Prensa had not appeared following censorship of articles. "They do not let us print the news," Mr. Chamorro said. The Sandinist government announced carlier this year that, during the campaign, it would limit censor-ship to military matters.

For his part, Mr. Mondale accused the president of proposing a Both presidential candidates, in dangerous new arms race, arguthat a Star Wars system would have require such hair-trigger reaction times that it "would delegate to shield in space to protect the Unit-ed States against nuclear missiles. a war."

Among outside experts, some question Mr. Mondale's "hair-trigger" description and suggest that there may someday be a place for such a system. But there is also widespread agreement that Mr. Reagan's "ultimate-dream" description of Star Wars goes well beyond anything now considered

The consensus among specialists is that the program would be ex-tremely costly and technically difficult, perhaps impossible.

"Our military knows and has said publicly that an airtight 'Astrodome' space defense is impossible," said Richard Garwin, an IBM nuclear physicist and an outspoken Star Wars opponent.

Even a decision on whether to try to build such a defense remains at least five years away. Mr. Reagan himself has said that the "formidable technical tasks ... may not be accomplished before the end of this

Moreover, critics and advocates agree that the Russians will seek a comparable system, if they are not already well along with one, and that such a defense could destabilize the nuclear balance of power unless carefully paced so that neither side lagged badly.

Mr. Reagan announced the program, to the surprise of Pentagon and most key administration officials, in March 1983.

Only 10 years earlier, the United States and the Soviet Union signed a treating banning anti-ballistic-missile systems. At that time, the two superpowers agreed that ABMs would not work because each side could add offensive missiles more cheaply than the other could build defensive ones.

Reagan Heckled at Oregon Campus In First Disruption of His Campaign

By David Hoffman on Post Service PORTLAND, Oregon - President Ronald Reagan was loudly heckled Tuesday by protesters at the University of Portland, turning what began as a neathy scripted campaign rally into a shouting match between rival partisans.

It was the first time this year that protesters made it through the tight screen campaign officials have used to keep protesters away from Mr. Reagan's rallies. It also marked the first disruption on the many college campuses Mr. Reagan has cam-paigned at this fall. Two hecklers were ejected from the hall.

Free Trade With Israel

zone with Israel could be more than just a special deal for a special friend. If it persuades other major trading nations that America is serious about freer trade, it could speed the process worldwide. But if it only leads others to more one-to-one compacts, it will further damage existing multilateral trade agreements.

A free-trade zone amounts to an agreement by two or more countries to remove all harriers to husiness among their citizens. Goods and services may cross their borders without limit or regulation. The European Community is the best working example, and it has its own arrangement with Israel. But there is no such thing as totally free trade between sovereign nacions. All governments still maintain domestic subsidies and regulations that favor their own industries over their partners'.

Arched across these individual agreements is the Geoeral Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, a compact of four decades ago to use multilateral agreements for gradually liberalizing and expanding all trade. Exceptions are allowed for free-trade blocs in special circum-stances, but the goal remains global free trade.

Israel first sought a zone with the United States in the late 1970s. When it revived the idea last spring, the Reagan administration agreed and asked Congress for authority in negotiate. The administration says it would prefer a multilateral removal of obstacles to trade but thinks bilateral progress is better than nothing. The trade bill passed by Congress in its closing days authorizes oegotiation with Israel. There have also been informal talks with Canada, but the magnitude of the

The United States's prospective free-trade trade that would be affected has limited the focus of the talks to a few industrial sectors. There have been conversations with the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, as well. But serious bargaining with anyone except Israel would require further congressional action.

A U.S.-Israel zone will not threaten the world's trade patterns. Trade between the two last year totaled only $3 billion. Full realization of any agreement will take years. But the agreement is important in three respects:

First, it aims to be a bold stroke, a formal commitment to open all trade. That will surely increase the two oations' commerce and assist Israel in significant ways. Second, it will signal America's interest in widening trade in services as well as goods things such as engineering, insurance and banking. Even as tariffs and quotas against products have been progressively slashed, there has been oo broad relaxation of licensing and regulations that discriminate against service industries. Such balance is long overdue.

Finally, this initiative puts the United States on the side of liberalization at a time when contrary pressures are rising everywhere. Washington has been trying to get another multilateral negotiation started. Western Europe and Japan have persistently balked.

Free-trade zones also carry a risk. Other nations could create more zones, again carving the world into exclusive trading spheres. But that is not Washington's message. If properly understood, the accord with Israel can advance liberalization to everyooe's benefit.

The Unhappy Case of Peru

The two largest Latin American debtors have been managing their finances with skill and growing indications of success. But both Brazil and Mexico have strong, sophisticated economies. There are other Latin countries where things are going much less well. Peru is a particularly distressing case, a country that was in serious trouble well before the interest rates soared and the debt crisis began. Its debts, in relation to the economy that must support them, are larger than Mexico's. A sense of desperation seems to be taking bold.

After years of solid growth, the Peruvian economy stagnated in the 1970s. Some of it was bad luck, such as the shift in ocean currents that damaged the fishing. Some of the reasons lay closer to home; the country was being run by an incompetent military junta. Income per capita was flat through the decade; since 1980, according to the government, it has fallen by one-fourth.

The strangest and most dismaying sign of internal strain in Peru is the emergence over the past four years of the terrorist organization called the Sendero Luminoso, or Shining Path, drawing its support from the impoverished Indian population of the highlands. They are young people, typically, who have managed to acquire a little education, and who then find that the road to a better life is oo longer opeo to them in a descriorating economy. The Scodero is a rebellion aimed at everything that beloogs to the modern industrial world. More specifically, it is aimed at everything Hispanie. That is wby this small organization generates such deep apprehensions in Peru. The country's people are mainly the descendanta of two distinct lines, the Spanish settlers and the Iodians who were there before the conquest. The Sendero hints at a revolt of one against the other. More than 3,500 people have been killed so far in the lighting, an astonishing toll when one considers that the Sendero has never had more than a couple of thousand members. The country's elected president, Fernando Belaunde Terry, is coming to the end of his term, and elections are to be beld next spring. For reasons familiar to Americans this year, the government is not currently showing much inclination to make difficult decisions on money and deficits. In its agreement with the International Monetary Fund, Peru committed itself to a series of economic targets, but it is now drifting far off course. Mr. Belaunde was in Washington a few weeks ago for talks with the IMF and President Reagan. He got sympathy, but oot much more. The view at the IMF is that it will be difficult in help Peru until Peru decides how best in help itself. Where larger, richer Latin countries have responded to recession and crisis with vigor, Peru seems to have been immobilized. But if its government can recover its grip oo the economy, Peru will deserve more substantial help from its friends abroad. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Other Opinion

Ronald Reagan's offer, repeated in the debate [m share U.S. anti-missile technology] — while it needs to be spelled out — somewhat resembles what the United States proposed in 1946 with the Baruch plan, which provided for putting all military ouclear technology into the hands of an international organization — thus giving the Soviet Union indirect control. Stalin immediately rejected the idea, even though the Soviet Union did not yet have a nuclear bomb, a discovery which remained an American monopoly for three more years.

Today, it is more difficult to imagine that the Soviet Union would give up the ouclear parity with the United States it has fought to achieve for more than 15 years, at the cost of enormous investments in strategie armaments. Perhaps the logic of Mr. Reagan's proposal envisions a similar initiative on the part of the Russians and their technology. We are far from reaching such a goal.

- Michel Tatu in Le Monde (Paris).

The instant attention was on who won and who lost, who stumbled over facts, who picked his nose. By those lights, Mr. Reagan did indeed do rather better. He wasn't so obviously tired. He recited his carefully rehearsed gag about age with a mild elan. He didn't maunder. By common consent it was either a narrow victory for Mr. Mondale or a draw; not, in any

It is hard in believe the outcome of the eleccions depends on one or two television debates. It would he insulting the decisionmaking capacities of millions of Americans to assume that they would allow their voting conduct to be influenced this way.

A British Plug for Reagan?

The British National Oil Company could have waited until after the American election to cut the price of oil. It doesn't help the oilexporting countries, and it will cost the British government $83 million in the current fiscal year. It doesn't even help Big Oil. All it helps is the people who will see the price of their gasoline and their home heating oil going down as they leave warm houses to drive to the polls. It did not cost the Reagan campaign a dime, but it will help him more than any number of paid commercials.

1909: Caruso Thrills Fans in Berlin BERLIN - Signor Enrico Caruso has been the main attraction in Berlin this week. His engagement called for three performances —
"Carmen," "Bohème" and "I Pagliacci" — and from Berlin he goes to Bremen for one performance before leaving for New York.
The opera-loving people of Berlin have been half-crazy to hear Signor Caruso. They have stood in line for hours to get tickets. It is oot often that a singer like Signor Caruso bestows his favors on Berliner ears. The official reason why Mile. Emmy Destinn failed in sing the rôle of Carmen with Signor Caruso was that she became ill suddenly. The unofficial reasons seem numerous. One of them may be that she receives 1.000 marks a night, while Signor Caruso receives 10,000 marks.

1934: Gandhi Plans to Step Down

BOMBAY - Mahatma Gandhi, despite pleas from his admirers, repeated his intention [on Oct. 23] to retire from the leadership of the Indian Nacionalist Congress. From followers from all parts of the country messages have poured in asking Gandhi to remain in com-mand, but Gandhi is adamant in his intention to retire from active leadership, saying that he had become a dead weight in the movement, was disgusted with the wrangling within the Congress and felt that the reins of leadership were slipping from hands that were fit to hold them. He added that he recognized his own unworthiness to infuse the spirit of nonviolence inm the minds of the Congress followers, but now he had no place and was leaving to concentrate on spreading this doctrine.

Why Once-Leery Europeans Are Pulling for Reagan

WASHINGTON—West Europeans, who have an impressive stake in the outcome of America's presidential election, had strong doubts about Ronald Reagan in 1980 but now are mostly in the Reagan camp because they find themselves in tune with his ideas, leadership style and policies.

President Reagan's popularity among America's partners partly reflects a oew European skepticism about the role of government that makes the allies more sympathetic to his minimalist approach than to Walter F. Mondale's economic and social interventionism. This is true in countries where conservatives govern. such as Britain and West Germany, but also where moderate socialists are at the helm, in France and Italy.

Moreover, the Reagan administration's mar-ket-based revival of U.S. economic growth is a major boon for troubled European economies, which only now are being pulled out of the doldrums by America's locomotive and unprec-edented trade deficits. Mr. Mondale's alliance with a besieged American labor force and his embrace of protectionism to save jobs raise fears abroad that the Atlantic free ride may Perhaps Mr. Reagan's major advantage for the allies is his proved ability to restore America's credibility as leader of the alliance. This role largely depends on the authority of the president himself. Europeans remember Jimmy Carter's failure in this respect and are relieved that his advoit successor has strengthened the alliance's political and military unity without the usual American resort to arrogant or heavy-handed manipulation of Atlantic affairs.

Part of Ronald Reagan's leadership success can be traced to the affability that makes him as popular abroad as at home, even if his Europecounterparts think that he is not their intellectual equal. After all, Jimmy Carter's superior grasp of the complex details of international issues seemed only to paralyze both him and his country. Mr. Mondale may be more capable than his former chief, but the allies prefer not to risk dealing with another confused Demo-cratic administration.

Like Americans, the allies ask themselves if they feel more secure now than four years ago.

By Michael Harrison

abruptly end under a Democratic president.

Perhaps Mr. Reagan's major advantage for pear that they would agree with Mr. Mondale and many Americans who feel that Republican defense policies have not enhanced Western security but have increased tensions to dangerous levels. European leftists and the peace movement do agree with the Mondaie analysis. but much of the public and most policy-makers support Mr. Reagan's efforts to bolster U.S. and North Atlantic Treaty Organization military strength against the Soviet menace.

Mr. Mondale's advocacy of a ouclear freeze and arms talks without conditions provoke little enthusiasm among most allied governments. who privately concur with the Reagan administration and no longer expect arms negotiations to produce significant results. Europeans might benefit from the Mondale proposal to ban weapons from space, a move that would enhance the deterrent value of earthbound British and French nuclear forces. But they also fear that Mr. Mondale's determination to reach some kind of arms agreement with Moscow might lead him to seek constraints on independent European forces as the price of a super-power deal. Mr. Reagan resisted giving the Russians this advantage at the Geneva talks, earning the gratitude of Paris and London.

The age factor may affect judgments about Mr. Reagan's leadership capacity in the United States, but it does not seem to bother the Old-World much. European alites have prospered under grand old men such as Konrad Adenance. and Charles de Gauile, while Italy's popular octogenarian Sandro Peruni is guaranteed success if, as expected, he runs for a second presidential term next year.

Europeans support the apparent choice of many Americans because they have benefited from Mr. Reagan's economic and security poli-cies. The allies would be as astonished as anyone in the United States, and perhaps more dismayed, if Election Day produced a surprise that shook up the alliance nearly as much as American politics.

The Socialist International: Prestige, but Mixed Results

By Jonathan Power

ONDON - Willy Brandt, the former chancellor of West Germany, has been in constant motion the last month using his immense presuige to seek to persuade the Sandinists to modify the election rules in Nicaragua and to encourage the rebels in El Salvador to come to negotifications in the Decideo Lord Novelet ations with President José Napoleon Duarte with a flexible position.

Mr. Brandt, even if he were speaking only for himself, would carry great weight — he has long been the Third World's favorite Western politician, perhaps because be works as much on the emotional level as the cerebral. But he is also taken seriously because, although out of office, be is a politician with a base. He is chairman of the West Ger-man Social Democratic Party and president of the Socialist International. The latter post pays his air fare and gives him a bona fide excuse for sticking in his oar.

There are member parties of the Socialist International in 57 countries. When Mr. Brandt speaks or negotiates he can pull on the fact that what he might say, or what is said to him, can influence the political stance, and the aid budget, of Socialist-ruled countries such as Sweden, Spain, Greece, France and Italy.

The Socialist network is not as European-dominated as it was 20 years ago. There are many Caribbean and South American members, although few from Africa or Asia.

The Socialist International traces its roots to the First International, founded in London in 1864. Karl Marx was its first leader. The Second International was founded in Paris in 1889, about a dozen years after the collapse of the First. It held together until World War I. The war years were followed by the revolutionary years and socialists were split into violently antagonistic camps. Io the Soviet Union the Bolsheviks established the Third International, the Comintern, in 1919. The democratic socialist parties reorganized themselves into the Labor and Socialist International in 1928. This fell apart under the impact of World War II.

In Frankfurt in 1951, the Socialist International was re-established. In 1976, Willy Brandt was elected president. Since then the organization has become increasingly energetic. Al-though it has only a small, back-street office in London with three full-time officers, its use of former heads of government to lead its traveling delegations gives it a rather larger image.
Yet its success is difficult to gauge

Mr. Braudt seems to have made little impact on the Sandinists. And in El Salvador, though he had a role in setting up the peace talks, his voice was merely part of the chorus. One could argue that the Socialist Ioter-national has failed to modify the Sandinists' position despite a series of major efforts stretching back to 1976. The Sandinists were invited to the Socialist International congress in Vancouver in 1978, and rallied the support of members such as Felipe González, who established the Socialist International committee for the defense of Nicaraguan revolution, in an effort to win the fledgling government some room for manenver, But in the end both Mr. González, now Spain's prime minister, and Mr. Brandt became less than enamored with the regime's direction.

They felt that the Sandinists were not completely bonest about their connections in Havana and Moscow. As one Socialist International official noted, in reference to the Sandinists' longstanding commitment to hold elections. They are taking a hell of a long time to do what they'd said

This is probably an opportunity missed. If the Sandinist leaders had entered the embrace offered by Mr. Brandt and Mr. González they probably could have secured their revolution while keeping the United States at arms' length. Immaturity and in-ternal discord seem to have prevent-

Nevertheless, the Socialist Internatiooal bas had its achievements.

When Michael Manley lost the prime ministership of Jamaica in a landslide vote four years ago, be turned up, shortly after, at the Socialist International congress in Madrid determined to quit politics. This would have left a dangerous vacuum in Jamaica, allowing the democratic so-cialists to be taken over by a strong pro-Cuban faction.

Olof Palme, now the Swedish prime minister, and others spent hours talking him out of it and convincing him the long haul back was important for the stability and inde-pendence of the whole Caribbean.

In the end the Socialist Internaoonal will he measured by its ability to export to the Third World the lessons of its own history in Europe — that as long as socialism is allied with Marxism it will appear suspect in many. But if socialism sheds Marxism it can become the party of office, able to blend the energy of capitalism with the bumanitarian urge of socialist thinking to help the weaker and more vulnerable members of society.

Alliance Fund: A Sponsor Is Needed To Help Break the Pattern of Debt

PARIS — A proposal aired in these columns on July 2, calling for the creation of an Alliance Fund to help solve the world debt crisis, has elicited a favorable reaction from debtor governments, multilateral in the developed countries and commercial bankers with portfolios of loans to the Third World,

What is oeeded oow is a sponsor. Taking into account understandable reservations that the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank might have, and the rigidity of governmental structures, it is the international commercial banking commu-nity that should take the lead in promoting this initiative, which central hankers are likely to encourage. All parties to the debt drama can take pride in the fact that oo defaults have been declared recently and that a reasonable hope remains of curing many problem cases. But this is no time for complacency.

The social and political problems caused in the debtor countries by adjustment programs have not abated. The danger posed by the national and international deflation resulting from these programs remains. The resources of the IMF appear certain to remain at the present level for some time; the possibilities for the institution to provide enlarged credit seem to he shrinking.

The recent multi-year rescheduling of Mexican debt was well done. Such an approach is better than the dangerous, habit-forming practice of re-scheduling some maturities yearly. But the precedent may become a pattern that raises questions: Long-term rescheduling auto-matically brings the countries in-volved outside the time period of an IMF presence. (There may be special agreements to ensure continued IMF monitoring, but this role, to be fully effective, should be not just that of an adviser but also that of an institution providing loans to the country.) Furthermore, there is a tendency in some recent negotiations to reduce, or even to exclude, the IMF role in preparing for reschedulings and in overseeing adjustment programs.

 With the emphasis being more on the rescheduling of commercial hanks' credits than on the rescheduling of official credits from governments and multilateral institutions. commercial bankers are being led into negotiations of a political nature. · Recent statistics suggest that the current, realistic round of multiyear reschedulings, of banks' loans and of some official loans, it would be highly desirable that relationships between debtor countries and commercial banks return as swiftly as possible to a normal pattern.

The proposed Alliance Fnod would contribute to a flexible program designed in meet future exceptional problems of debtor countries. Governments of industrial democra-cies and of richer OPEC countries, multilateral development institutions and international commercial banks would jointly set up a fund to he managed by the IMF and the World Bank, possibly in coordination with the Bank for International Settle-additional resources and would thus maintain a lasting presence in the problem countries. These countries would receive both financial support and the guidance that can be given in a politically acceptable way only by the IMF and the World Bank. In turn, they should understand that the program would provide emergency assistance only for unexpected requirements,

As a contribution to a better longterm solution of the debt problem, and as a quid pro quo for being relieved of an inappropriate frontline role in nonbanking negotiations with problem countries, international commercial banks would commit a substantial participation to the Alliance Fund. In most cases, this would not be more than a small fraction of the large reserves and provisions they make on their international loans.

The willingness of the international banking community in make a significant contribution in the Alliance Fund should help trigger an agree-ment by the most reluctant Western governments and OPEC countries to make an additional contribution to the Third World in a way that would further improve the prospects for a solution of the debt problem. The proposal:

CIA Urged Pro-Neutron Bomb Stories in Europe

By Walter Pincus

Washington Past Serine
WASHINGTON — The Carter administration ordered a covert CIA program in early 1978 to induce the European press to write favorable stories about neutron weapons and to expose Soviet efforts to stop deployment, according to a study by the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

The Central Intelligence Agency program included a plan to pay foreign journalists to write "favor-able articles," according to a for-mer Carter administration official who had a part in the early planning of the program.

The Harvard study alluded to possible payments to journalists, saying that the covert activity contemplated "asking U.S. sympathizers and agents in the European press corps to give more favorable press coverage to the bomb either for money or for free."

However, there is no indication that payments were made. The study did not list any newspapers or journalists who might have re-ceived money from the CIA or might have been influenced by the

The report cites two January 1978 State Department memos by Leslie H. Gelb, who at the time was director of politico-military affairs at the State Department and who now is the national security correspondent for The New York Times.

Mr. Gelb's Jan. 12, 1978 memo was entitled "Proposal for action in response to Soviet anti-neutron bomb campaign." The Psychology of Guerrilla Warfare: A CIA Primer for Nicaragua ASHINGTON — Following are ex-Cuerrillo Warfage " a primar for Nicara-Guerrilla Warfare," a primer for Nicara-guan rebels prepared by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the subject of Washington debate about its propriety. The document was translated from the Spanish by the Congressional Research Service at the request of the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

Armed Propaganda Teams are formed through a careful selection of persuasive and highly motivated guerrillas who move about within the population, encouraging the people to support the guerrillas and put up resistance against the enemy. It combines a high degree of political awareness and the "armed" propaganda ability of the guerrillas toward a planned. programmed and controlled effort.

The combatant propagandist guerrillas are the result of a continuous program of indoctrination and motivation. They will have the mission of showing the people how great and fair our movement is in the eyes of all Nicaraguans and the world. Identifying themselves with our people, they will increase the sympathy toward our movement, which will result in greater support of the population for the freedom commandos, reducing support for the regime in power. Armed propaganda will extend this identifi-cation process of the people with the Christian guerrillas, providing converging points against the Sandinista regime. The Armed Propaganda Teams provide a multistage program of persuasive planning in guerrilla warfare. These teams are also the "eyes and ears" of our movement. The development and control of the cover organizations in guerrilla warfare will give our movement the ability to create a "whiplash" effect within the population, when the order for fusion is given. When infiltration and internal subjective control have developed in a manner parallel to other guerrilla activities, a commandant of ours will literally be able to shake up the Sandinista structure, and replace it.

Group discussions raise the spirit and increase the unity of thought in small guerrilla groups and exercise social pressure on the weakest members to better carry out their mission in training and future combat actions. These group discussions will give special em-phasis to creating a favorable opinion of our movement. Through local and national history, make it clear that the Sandinista regime is "foreignizing," "repressive," and "imperialistic," and that, even though there are some Nicaraguans within the government, they are "pup-pets" of the power of the Soviets and Cuhans. i.e., of foreign power.

O insure popular support, essential for the good development of guerrilla war-fare, the leaders should induce a positive interaction between civilians and guerrillas, through the principle of "live, eat and work with the people," and maintain control of their activities. In group discussions, the leaders and political cadres should give emphasis to posiovely identifying themselves with the people.

in an intentional form or by chance, the reason of the advance posts to have to fire on a citizen for the weapons:

"The weapons will be for winning freedom; they are for you.

With weapons we can impose demands such as hospitals, schools, better roads and social services for the people, for you." "Our weapons are, in truth, the weapons of the people, yours." "With weapons we can change the Sandino-Communist regime and return to the people a true democracy so that we will all have economic oppportunities." All of this should be designed to create an identification of the people with the weapons and the guerrillas who carry them. Finally, we should make the people feel that we are thinking of them and that the weapons are the people's, to help them and protect them from a Communist, totalitarian, imperialist regime, indifferent to the needs of the population.

A guerrilla armed force always involves implicit terror because the population, without saying it aloud, fears that the weapons may be used against them. However, if the terror does not become explicit, positive results can be

N a revolution, the individual lives under a constant threat of physical harm. If the government police cannot put an end to the guerrilla activities, the population will lose confidence in the government, which has the inherent mission of guaranteeing the safety of cio-zens. However, the guerrillas should be careful not to become an explicit terror, because this would result in a loss of popular support.

When a meeting is held, conclude it with a statement to the effect that people can reveal everything about this visit of our commandos, because we are not afraid of anything or anyone, neither the Soviets nor the Cubans. Emphasize that we are Nicaraguans, that we are lighting for the freedom of Nicaragua and to establish a genuinely Nicaraguan government.

Armed propaganda in populated areas should not give the impression that weapons are the power of the guerrillas over the people, but rather that the weapons are the strength of the people against a regime of repression.

Whenever it is necessary to use armed force in an occupation or visit to a town or village, guerrillas should emphasize that:

 This is being done to protect them, the people, and not the guerrillas themselves. The action, though not desirable, is necessary because the final objective of the insurrection is a free and democratic society, where acts of force will no longer be necessary.

 The force of weapons is a necessity caused hy the oppressive system, and will cease to exist when the "forces of justice" of our movement assume control.

Powers of Italy's Magistrates Have Grown As They Pursue War on Mafia, Terrorists

By E.J. Dionne Jr.

New York Times Service

OME — The recent vigorous investigations of the Mafia and an expected report on the shooting of Pope John Paul II have focused attention on a major development in Italian life: the growing power of the ment in Italian life: the growing power of the major development in Italian life: the growing power of t country's independent magistrates.

Armed with wide powers to arrest, imprison and interrogate, the magistrates have become central players in an effort to reduce political corruption and the influence of organized crime — goals known here broadly as moralizing Italian life.

The growth in the magistrates' influence has been at the expense of the normal parliamentary institutions of government. Many here say the magistrates stepped into a vacuum left by politi-cal leaders. The magistrates took it upon themselves to enforce law and order because they felt it wasn't being done elsewhere," said Ludina Barzini, an editor and a leader in the Liberal Party. "They substituted themselves for the central power."

THE term magistrates covers a wide range of figures in the Italian judicial system and includes prosecutors as well as udges. Magistrates, who are selected competiovely, often play a major investigative role, as in the case of the shooting of the pope and judicial inquiries into the Mafia.

The magistrates' power and respect began to grow during the 1970s and the early 1980s, when the Red Brigades threatened to start what some here feared might become a civil war. In cooperadon with the carabinieri, the police force linked to the military, the magistrates helped cripple, if not eliminate, the well-organized ter-some of Sicily's leading politicians.

Yet even magistrates themselves believe that their new-found influence is a dangerous sign, a symptom of the difficulties Italy's elected institutions are having in dealing with the country's most difficult problems.

"We didn't want to substitute for the political powers," said Judge Ferdinando Imposimato, one of Italy's most respected jurists and a leader in the invesogation of the Mafia. "But we've seen that the political powers were not always facing these problems."

OREOVER, even some who praise the magistrates' work against the Red Brigades and the Mafia worry about their broad powers.

"It is somewhat dangerous because they have great power in their hands," Miss Barzini said. Justice in Italy is very slow, and if the magistrates decide to, they can put someone in jail for two years. And are they guilty?" She shrugged. Yet Miss Barzini also summed up why the magistrates became so popular.

"We've gone overboard a bit in another direction, but I get the feeling that someone had to do it," she said, "to rule the country while the politicians squabbled in Rome." Virtually every magistrate will say that men such as Mr. Falcone or Judge Ilario Martella who has been leading the investigation of the shooting of the pope, should not be viewed as typical. Many magistrates deal with routine

There isn't a strong vertical structure."
Experts on the Italian legal system say that one important trend and the rise of the Red Brigades converged to create the current power

The trend was the rise of new political and economic issues that as often as not were te-solved in court rather than in parliament.

The power of the magistrates has increased steadily for the last 20 years for one main reason: The growth in our society of a modern capitalist economy," said Professor Gustavo Ghidini, a professor of commercial law at the , University of Pavia. "That modern structure has . been faced by the antiquity of our legal code. which was written for a prewar society.

FEW issues came up faster than parliament had the ability — or the desire — to change the law, Professor Ghidini said, so judges were called on to make many decisions. "This gave them great latitude for interpretation, adaptation and, in some cases, invention," he said.

Moreover, he said that in Italy, as in the United States, the 1960s and 1970s saw the growth of new social movements, such as consumer groups and environmental organizations, -These movements, he said, often pushed their causes in the courts at least as much as in

But Judge Beria d'Argentin and others here contend that the rise of the Red Brigades had the most to do with the growth in the mag-

Valentino and Ungaro Are Set To Repeat Previous Successes

PARIS — Valentino and Uo-garo should be in fashion nirvana. Both of them had best-selling autumn collections. With what they just showed, they stand to do an encore for the spring. The clothes of these two designers are produced by an Italian company, Gruppo Finanziaro Tessile, or GFT, which may account for the excellent finish of their clothes. While the ready-to-wear of many conturiers looks like, ves, ready-towear, Ungaro's and Valentino's looks more like couture. So much so that, except for the price tag, it is often difficult to tell the two apart.

Long in fashion Siberia, Valen-tino has finally been asked to join the fold. He was invited to the Elysee Palace last Wednesday with the rest of the international designers and he showed in the tents in the Tuileries Gardens under the patronage of the French Chambre Syndicale de la Couture. Hewlett-Packard Attempts To Retain Innovative Flair

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

international Herold Tribune ENEVA - Two months after its parent in the United States announced a major reorganization, Hewlett-Packard Europe has announced big changes in its European operations — but with a difference.

For this successful people-come-first company, the challenge is to allow its innovative and entrepreneurial spirit to flourish in its new consolidated - and at the management level, more centralized - structure.

However, while the U.S. restructuring has lead to a more centralized operation, the European changes are centered on flexibility at local level.

Hewlett-Packard Co., the California producer of electronic instruments and computer products, with $4.7 billion in sales for 1983 and an annual sales-growth rate of 25 percent, came third in Fortune's list of most admired U.S. corporations. For the attracting, developing and keeping talented people.

But the company's weakness in today's fast-moving integrated computer market is that it makes expensive products by engineers for engineers. In Europe, Hewlett-Packard's share of this market is still relatively small. The company has 2.5 percent to 5 percent of the micro- and personal-computer market. It has 10.5 percent of the mini-computer European market and is ranked third in that category after IBM Europe, its main competitor, with 20 percent, and Digital Equipment Corp., with 12 percent.

OP management, after contemplating a change for the past two years, decided to bring its managers more into the

The company faces the same challenge of keeping the spirit of innovation world-wide. But Hewlett-Packard's experience may prove that, contrary to a widely held view, some European managers' resistance to change is no greater than that of U.S. managers. According to Franz Nawratil, the newly appointed director of marketing and sales for Europe, reorganization in Europe, officially announced Sept. 26, is moving along faster than it is in the United States. He attributes this to the new emphasis on decentralization at national level.

In a Europe where markets differ widely by country. Herdett-

In a Europe where markets differ widely by country, Hewlett-Packard's new listening-to-the-market strategy has meant greater responsibilities for individual country teams. This isn't a classical reorganization where everything was decided somewhere in a dark room and then management was given the opportunity to implement it," says Mr. Nawratil.

Franco Mariotti, corporate vice-president Europe, in charge of Hewlett-Packard for Europe, Middle East and Africa, says the watchword is flexibility. "We are leaving a certain flexibility to the local team," he says.

Thus, it may be easier for managers to accept the reorganization in Europe than in the United States, where in contrast to the European restructuring, there has been more centralization.

There is a certain drive in Europe to become more independent, a little more the master of your own destiny. This reorganization has created an environment in which these elements could come out," says Mr. Nawratil.

Hewlett-Packard Europe not only imports products from the United States; it has created several important products itself. Where there will be greater consolidation in Europe — and in some cases, centralization — will be at the sales level. This is the area where Hewlett-Packard Europe will have to maintain a delicate balance. "We prefer decentralization, provided the customer is served better," says Mr. Mariotti, "But if that isn't the case, then we will recentralize to better serve the customer.

The biggest effect in Europe will be in sales organization. involved," says Andre Schwager, senior vice president with (Continued on Page 11, Col. I)

But Ashland Oil Posts Big Loss

NEW YORK - Exxan Corp. the world's largest oil company, said Tuesday its earnings rose 4.1 percent in the third quarter to $1.28 billion from $1.23 billion a year earlier. But Ashland Oil Inc. reported a loss of $240.9 million in the period.

Nine-month carnings at Exxon climbed 22 percent to $4.10 billion from $3.36 billion a year earlier. Sales in the third quarter rose 0.8 percent to $23.52 billion from $23.34 billion, and rose 4 percent in the first nine months to $72.73 billion from $69.93 billion.

Exxon said a stock-buyback program helped to raise per-share earnings at a faster rate than total net earnings. Per-share earnings rose 12.1 percent in the third quarter, to $1.58 from $1.41 a year earlier. For the first nine months, pershare earnings rose 28.1 percent, to $4.97 from $3.88.

Exxon reported growth this year in oil and natural-gas production and from its chemicals business. But Exxon's chairman, Clifton C. Garvin Ir., said it had sharply low-er earnings from the sale of relined petroleum products, such as gaso-line, because worldwide surpluses med to unsettle markets.

In the nine months ended Sept. 30, the company spent $1.975 bil-tion to repurchase 48.397 million of its shares. And since it began the repurchase program in July 1983, Exxon has bought back 69 million shares for a total of $2,759 billion.

Flash vs. Tradition in Tokyo's Ginza

'Store Wars' Show Dualism Of Japanese Life

By Susan Chira New York Times Service TOKYO - At the rate of 200,000 a day, Tokyo shoppers are streaming into the Ginza to stare at two competing visions of the ultimate Japanese depart-ment store. And what they see are two competing versions of contemporary Japan. A glass walkway is just about the only thing that connects the new branches of the Seibu and Hankyu department stores in the Ginza - the famous central business district that has some of Fifth Avenue's cachet and Rodeo Drive's stylishness, but is of-ten so crowded that Orchard Street, on Manhattan's Lower East Side, seems more like it.

Puppets dance and television sets flicker in Seibu's windows, while mannequins in gray and black suits stare silently from the Hankyu branch. Seibu blares music that keeps the decibel level at a clamorous pitch, while Hankyn shoppers are greeted with soft Muzak and the chirping voices of young women.
Scibu has devoted an entire floor to services such as vacation home bookings, life insurance, home loans for women and other credit information; Hankyu has reserved most of its space for merchandise.

The two stores recently opened on the same day, bringing the number of department stores in the Ginza area to eight (including two Hankyus within 200 yards of each other) and leading the press to describe the contest as "the department store wars." Serbu's advertising slogan is "Mind Theater" and Hankyu's is "Authentic."

At stake is which retailing strategy best appeals to Japanese consumers, whose tastes are changing as the society grows more accustomed to affluence and the choices it offers. Japan has always excelled at assimilation, embracing modern adaptations while retaining the traditions it considers indispens-able. But where once the Japanose considered any famous foreign-brand-name product chic, they are oow more selective and more demanding.

ed, according to Tamon Naka-mura, president of Stores mura, president of Stores Company Ltd., which publishes four newspapers and magazines devoted to retailing. He predict-ed that Japanese department stores would have to rethink their traditional retailing strate-

Statistics compiled by govern-ment agencies indicate that changes are indeed taking place. For example, in 1965, Japanese: consumers spent 68 percent of their income for goods, according to the Economic Planning: Agency, Today they spend 57 percent of their income for ser-

And according to Sbuichi Oba, an official in the Ministry of International Trade and Industry who oversees large-scale retailers, a study group on con-sumer behavior has predicted that Japanese consumers in this decade will spend more of their money on services and distinc-tive, high-quality goods.

Moreover, real earnings of Japanese households began to increase in 1982, and with them consumption. For example, Tokyo department store sales in September alone were $575 million, up 4.5 percent from a year earlier, according to the Japan Department Stores Association. Both the new Scibu and Han-kyn stores still draw record crowds — on a recent national boliday, white-gloved guards with bullhorns struggled to keep people moving through the

Compared with these new centers, which have drawn the temperature and wounter professionals. agers and young professionals, the Ginza has come to be regarded as a bit staid, even stuffy.

Scibu is gambling that its un-orthodox style best suits the Japancse consumer's new mood.

"In the past, Japanese con-sumers behaved uniformly," said Shunichiro Uchimura, the direc-tor and general manager of the 'Ginza branch. "The days of indi-(Continued on Page 11, Col. 1)

the sharpest decline in five months. the Commerce Department said

Orders for durable goods, those expected to last three or more years, such as appliances and military hardware, dropped by $4.4 bil-lion to a level of $97.6 billion, the department said.

The September decline followed a 0.3 percent increase in August and was the steepest decline since a 6.5 percent drop in April.

Consumers cut back sharply on spending in July and August and the level of September orders was likely a reflection of this decrease. Consumer spending rebounded in September and most analysts expect demand for durable goods to start climbing again in coming

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said that the September decline was largely due to the auto strike against General Motors Corp. and a sharp drop in orders for defense equipment.

"After five quarters of rapid recovery, the economy has settled back to moderate growth," Mr. Baldinge said. "A rebound of auto production, further modernization and expansion by business and the defense build-up should lift dura-ble goods orders this month, signal-ing continued growth ahead.

The Commerce Department said much of the weakness came in the transportation industry, where orders were down 14.5 percent, It was the lourth decline in the last six months in this industry segment, All transportation segments were down, but the report said motor vehicles accounted for most of the decline. New orders for primary metals were down by 8 percent following an increase of 0.6 percent in August. New orders for machinery were up 0.7 percent following a 1.3 percent decline in August.

The closely watched category of non-defense capital goods posted its first increase since May, rising 2.3 percent. This category reflects industry plans to expand and modernize and thus is considered a good barometer of future produc-tion levels.

The Associated Press NEW YORK -- The dollar fell broadly Tuesday, staging its sharpest retreat in a month. Currency dealers attributed the drop to a growing belief that U.S. interest rates have not finished falling.
The Federal Reserve Board

said its measure of the dollar, weighted on the basis of trade with the currencies of 10 other industrialized nations, dropped 11- percent from Monday, the steepest one-day decline since it fell more than 2 percent Sept.

But in contrast to last month, when the dollar plummeted af-ter West German central bank intervention, Tuesday's retreat was described as orderly.

Soviet Bankers Study Further Use Of ECU Financing

PARIS — Last month's Europe-an Currency Unit loan for the Sovi-et foreign trade bank, Vneshtorg-bank, was experimental and Soviet authorities need time to decide about any further use of ECU financing the first deputy chairman of the Soviet State Bank, Valery

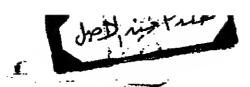

Pekshev, said Tuesday. This was the first Soviet entry into the ECU market, which has only just begun to develop as a financial source, he told journalists after an East-West banking symposium in Paris.

Mr. Pekshev noted the success of the five-year operation, which was doubled during syndication to raise 150 million ECUs ($108 million) from 75 million ECUs originally sought. The lead manager was Credit Lyonnais.

Kodak to Sell Floppy Disks The Associated Press

ROCHESTER, New York --Eastman Kodak Co. said Tuesday it will sell a line of floppy disks for small computers as the entry point for a major diversification effort into electronic data storage. Kodak disappointed some securities anaysts by announcing no new products of its own, instead saying it would initially sell other suppliers' floppy disks.

Kodak said it would initially sell a complete line of magnetic disks in 8-inch, 514-inch and 31/2-inch formats.

Kodak, hurt by slow growth and competition in its staple businesses —photographic film and chemicals — is moving into a $2-billion sector of the electronics marketolace that is fastgrowing but already crowded.

Bank Group Assails Move By Sears

WASHINGTON — The decision by Sears, Roebuck & Co. to buy a Delaware bank is a serious step further in the fraying of the U.S. financial system, a banking group warned Tuesday.

Sears announced Monday that its financial services unit would buy the Delaware bank despite proposed federal legislation that might later force the nation's largest retailer to sell it. Sears said it would continue to lobby against

"It's really what we warned about," said Kenneth Guerather, executive director of the 7,100member Independent Bankers Association of America.

He referred to his group's criticism of last week's decision by C.T. Conover, comparoller of the currency, to let lapse a moratorium on financial institutions setting up consumer banks.

"It underlines again the urgent need for presidential action to stop the regulatory unraveling of our Vauxhall Motors Ltd., the British financial system." said Mr. subsidiary of General Motors Guenther, whose organization rep-resents small and medium-size

LONDON — The government of Jordan and 15 Jordanian banks and financial institutions have es-tablished a consortium bank in London. The new bank, Jordan Finance Consortium PLC, will begin operations at the end of this month with capital of £20 million ($23.8

The government of Jordan will hold 20 percent of Jordan Finance Corsortium, which said it plans to participate in the financing of British-Jordanian trade, enable its shareholders to operate more effectively in international husiness and provide banking services for the Arab community in Britain. Mohamed Said Nabulsi, governor of the Central Bank of Jordan. was named chairman of the new bank; Zuhair Khouri was named deputy chairman, and Maorice Constant, formerly of Ottoman Bank and Grindlays Bank Ltd., was appointed general manager.

New Unit Combines Lloyds' Merchant Banks

Lloyds Bank is merging the mer-chant banking activities of Lloyds Bank futernational Ltd. and Lloyds Bank PLC in a new mer-chant banking unit. Robert Owen, currently a director of Lloyds Bank international, has been named chief executive of the new group.

The move brings Lloyds into line with the other large U.K. clearing banks, all of which have merchant banking units. Last week, Lloyds Bank announced plans to merge with its overseas banking arm, ed Pierre Godec to succeed Pierre Chouzenoux as managing director. Mr. Godec previously was a managing director of Elf Nigeria. Westdentsche Landesbank Giro-zentrale has named Erhard Pascher senior vice president and co-manager of its Frankfurt office, succeeding Klaus Pesch. Mr. Pesch succeeds Mr. Pascher as senior vice president and general manager of the Düsseldorf-based bank's Tokyo branch.

Nigeria International Bank has named Francis A. Rozario as man-aging director. The Lagos-hased bank is a new commercial-banking venture 60-percent owned by Nige-rian shareholders and 40-percent owned by Citibank N.A. Mr. Rozario formerly was the head of Citi-bank's branch in Liberia. Union Bank of Norway has named Malcolm S. Allen senior representative of its group activiwith its overseas banking arm, Lloyds Bank International.

Scibu stresses high technology at their storefront, hut we want to stress personal service to our customers through our sales clerks. By the word 'authentic,' we don't mean just expensive things. We try to provide goods that satisfy people who stopped chasing famous hrand names just for their name's sake, and who want to use good-quality products for a long time."

Junji Tanaka, a spokesman for Mitsukoshi, said Japan's first department store has found little reason to tinker with its own formulas. But in its Ginza store, Mitsukoshi has upgraded food and fashion de-partments and now has a coffee shop on the second floor. Other stores on the Ginza are reported to have undertaken similar remova-

Investors in the world's major financial centers pay as much as US $ 100.- per year to receive this internationally acclaimed Newsletter, but:

Here's how readers of the International Herald Tribune can obtain a subscription to this same report free and without obligation.

There is no doubt that many of the worlds greatest fortunes were mode by those willing to take o risk-whether drilling for oil, ocquining property that no one else seemed to want, or in the stock market, a place else seemed to want, or in the stock market, o place where the biggest winners are not those who buy the same well-known shores, purchased moinly by Banks and insurance companies. The biggest winners are clearly those who participate in the growth of or even entirely new industries, and then gradually sell out those holdings at much, much higher prices to investors who prefered to wait to climb oboard, until those companies or industries have become widely known companies or industries have become widely known. But what is it that separates the investor who seizes the right opportunities, and sees his money multiply over and over again, from the investor who buys the same issues as everyone else and realizes less return than he will get from his bank? The difference is:

the secret of "SPECIAL SITUATION" INVESTING.

In the past, such well-known investors as Friedrich Flick and the first Baron von Rothschild, followed the principle of "SPECIAL SITUATION" investing. But how can you as an individual investor today, be alerted early enough to these "SPECIAL SITUATIONS" both in and out of Europe, whenever they occur?

Chartwell Securities AG, advises our clients to read every issue, without fail, of a Financial Newsletter that is little-known autside of specially informed circles... Published in London, by a securities' firm that spe-ciulizes in discovering situations of just this kind, in each issue it describes in detail, one or more situations, still undiscovered by the investing world, where opportunities exist to invest at prices of today, so that when these some opportunities are later discovered by when these some opportunities are later discovered by others wishing to participate, readers of this special report can unload, perhaps re-investing a portion of the profit they have earned in a future "SPECIAL SITUATION".

How to obtain a free subscription: The name of this little-known report is the "TRAFALGAR CAPITAL REPORT", ond in the October issue, being distributed this week, the report describes a company whose shares are actively traded in America, but that unknown to the investing public, it has a virtual manapoly in its field. It operates in on industry that throughout the United States is illegal ...

But it works through a loop-hale in the law that no other publicly-quoted company has yet found. Chartwell Securities AG, believes that these reports are so important - virtually essential - to o "SPECIAL SITUATION investor today, that we have, by special orrangement, mode a limited number of free subscriptions available to the readers of the International Herald Tribune today

If you wish to be included among those who receive a free subscription, beginning with the October issue, please be certain to write or coll us today.

HESE are the key ingredients: a boy and L his mother in peril, a murderous manipulator of people and finances bent on gaining control of an entire population, a weird place (continent? world?) peopled by primitive humans and bizarre creatures, some vaguely humanoid working on the side of good and some for whom the word monstrous was invented. Would you accept a benign werewolf? How about a crocodile thing that bites off hands? Imagine a repellent, toothy head that sprouts worms. Add to this a grail in the form of a talisman that possibly can provide the boy with powers to triumph over evil and you have this book . . . but only in its essence.

Much of Stephen King's and Peter Straub's "The Talisman" occurs in The Territories, an alternate-universe just a bop and a nod from the reality you see when you look out your windows. You can go to The Territories by willing it, by drinking a hideous concection, or sometimes by accident — perhaps you uttered the wrong words when you thought you were only invoking your mantra. In The Territories live not-quite-doppelgangers whose names and features and activi-ties only echo conventional reality of the world where the protagonist was born. His name is Jack Sawyer but in The Territories there was a even before you meet him. In fact, if this book is to be faulted, it is mostly on the basis of contrivance. It is oot so much a novel as it is a film vehicle and Steven Spielberg already has the movie rights. You can expect to see the worms emerge from the head, arms devoured and bloody stumps spouting gore - all on wide screen with full color and a superb soundtrack to provide every scream and moan. And there's a chase to delight any director — on a bizarre railroad train, with scenes made even more bizarre by the presence of hand grenades, crossbows, machine guns, spears and explosive plastique.

Certainly, "The Talisman" concludes with a rousing confrontation in an extraordinary set-ting that is just familiar enough to make your neck hair stand on end. This review won't spoil it for you with too much detail but the old hotel, black as original sin and with stinking sea water lapping at its pilings (sea water occupied by hideous creatures, of course) is a fitting place for the tale to reach its climax.

You may gather that this is a recommendation to go out and get the book for a long and enjoyable read — but only if you are into good horror and suspense. If you're not one for the cracking fire in the fireplace, late night outside and a single lamp lighting the page: while you wonder "What was that creaking noise on the roof?" — then forget it. This is no longer :

recommendation. Is this a literary masterpiece to live for the ages? Who knows and who cares? The Talk: man is exactly what it sets out to be a fine variation on suspense and horror filled with many surprises, a ground King and Strand have plowed before with great success, togeth.

NBA Will Begin Its 39th Year After Off-Season of Movement

By Sam Goldaper New York Times Service

NEW YORK - in a move to provide additional revenue, the National Basketball Association expanded its playoff qualifiers last season from 12 teams to 16. The move didn't help the Houston Rockets, Chicago Bulls and San Diego Clippers, who still failed to make the playoffs. But in an active off-season, all three made moves designed to get themselves there this time. The Clippers even moved to Los Angeles.
When the NBA opens its 39th senson on Friday, the focus will be on those moves; on the standout crop of rookies, six of whom were members of the gold-medal U.S. Olympic team; on four new coaches; on the drastic movement of players between teams and on the Clippers' move — done without league permission. Since the move, the Clippers have tried hard to erase their losers' image. Only four players remain from last season's 30-52 team. In a six-player trade with Mil-wankee, the Clippers got Marques Johnson, who starred in college at UCLA. "When a team wins only 55 games in two seasons," said General Manager Carl

Scheer, "you can't stand pat."

Houston, with the first pick in the last two drafts, will unveil a front line of 7-foot (2.13-meter) Akcem Olajuwon, 7-loot-4 Ralph Sampson and 6-7 Rodney

Chicago has had eight coaches since the end of the 1974-75 season, but has been in the playoffs only twice. The Bulls are counting heavily on Michael Jordan, the star of the U.S. Olympic team and the college player of the year the last two seasons.

Terry Cummings, averaging 22.9 points and about 10 rebounds in San Diego, should help the Bucks make up for the loss of Johnson and the retirement of Bob Lanier. Other key players who have moved are Kiki Vandeweghe, the NBA's third-best scorer (29.4), Calvin Nau, Dan Roundfield, Cliff Robinson, Junior Bridgeman, Gus Williams, Ricky Sobers, Caldwell Jones, Johnny Davis and Gerald Henderson.

In the coaching ranks, Cotton Fitzsimmons left the Kansas City Kings to take over at San Antonio. The Kings replaced him with Jack McKinney, dismissed by the Iodiana Pacers. George Irvine left his job as the Pacers' director of basketball operations to lead the team from the bench. George Karl also made a move, leaving Cleveland's front office to take over as coach. At 33, he is the youngest coach in the NBA.

A look at the NBA's Western Conference:

MIDWEST DIVISION

The Utah Jazz enjoyed a storybook season that produced a divisional champion and four statistical leaders — Adrian Dantley, Rickey Green, Darrell Griffith and Mark Eaton. Dantley, who stayed away from training camp in a salary dispute, won the scoring title (30,6 points per game); Green, the playmaker, led in steals and was sixth in assists; Griffith was the top shooter from 3-point range, and the 7-3 was the top shooter from 3-point range, and the 7-3 Eaton, in his first full season, led in shot blocking. But the Jazz should be hard pressed to fend off a challenge from the young Dallas Mavericks. Sticking with its five-year draft development plan, the team reached the playel's. Dallas has scorers in Mark Aguirre and Rolando Blackman, but lacks the big, physical center it often takes to leap from a 43-victory o 50-victory season.

Putting Sampson and Olajuwon on the same front line was only part of the Houston Rockets' off-season strategy. The other big push was finding capable playmaters to get the ball to them. A trade with San Antonio brought John Lucas, who finished fourth in the league in assists (10.7), and Lionel Hollins, once among the NBA's smoothest guards. San Antonio's Fitzsimmmons, in his (ifth NRA head

Mitchell-led team that has no difficulty scoring. The Spurs' main problems were that they expected too much from 35-year-old 7-2 Artis Gilmore and needed a power forward and a defensive-minded guard. James Bailey's arrival from Houston provides some fromline bulk and Alvin Robertson, the top draft choice, is a defense-oriented guard.

It didn't take Vince Boryla, new president of the Denver Nuggets, long to realize that two high-scoring small forwards of the caliber of Kiki Vandeweghe and Alex English, was one two many. He also found a depleted backcourt. So he engineered the trade with Portland that produced three potential starters: 6-6 Calvin Natt, who averaged 16.2 points as a Trail Blazer; Lafayette Lever, a playmaker, and Wayne

Reggie Theus's arrival in Kansas City last February provided the franchise with the excitement and glam-our it had lacked. If he can approach his 23.8 scoring mark of 1983, it would create an all-star backcourt with Larry Drew. Eddie Johnson is a fine small forward and LaSalle Thompson is growing up as a center.

PACIFIC DIVISION

The Los Angeles Lakers have a good mixture of youth and age. All five starters are of all-star caliber and some of the reserves are not far behind. An added emotional lift could be to win it "for Kareem" -Abdul-Jabbar, the 37-year old center, has talked about etiring after this season.

His sky hook remains one of the game's most potent offensive weapons and a major reason the Lakers have been the top scoring team the last three seasons.
Earvin Johnson, the league leader in assists (13.1), gets the ball to James Worthy for his swooping, soaring shots, to Michael Cooper for his slam dunks and to Bob McAdoo, Jamaal Wilkes and Byron Scott for their perimeter shots.

How close the Portland Trail Bluzers can make the race will depend partly on how good a pro center 7-1 Sam Bowie turns out to be. The second player selected in the draft, he will enable Mychal Thompson to concentrate on being the power forward, the position he is better suited for. Vandeweghe's pull-up jumpers and backdoor lay-ups will take some of the opponents' attention away from Jim Paxson, an outstanding shooting guard and the team's top scorer.

Bill Walton is the key for the Los Angeles Clippers At times, he has played the power forward on the same line with 7-2 James Donaldson. The Clippers have never had trouble scoring; the problem has been on defense. Junior Bridgeman and Marques Johnson, ooth newly acquired, know how to win, and Norm Nixon is a classy playmaker and scorer.

The Phoenix Suns could be in trouble. They have lost guard Walt Davis, the team's top scorer (20.0), for at least two months with torn knee ligments and Maurice Lucas is an unsigned free agent. Coach John MacLeod would like to see Alvan Adams as a power forward if 7-2 James Edwards can become a first-rate

The Seattle SuperSonics' strength is up front with 6-11 Jack Sikma, a consistent, bruising center; 6-11 Tom Chambers and 6-6 Al Wood, Tim McCormick, 6-11, the top draft choice, should help. The problem has been replacing Fred Brown and David Thompson, once standouts, in the backcourt.

Golden State could miss the playoffs for the eighth straight season. The Warriors may be in more trouble if they fail to re-sign Joe Barry Carroll, the free agent center. With no first-round draft choice, Couch John Bach needs backcourt help from Othell Wilson and Steve Burtt, a pair of second-round picks, to spell Eric Floyd and Lester Conner.

The likely playoff teams: Lakers, Trail Blazers, Clippers, Suns, Sonies, Mavericks, Jazz, Rockets.

Underdog Wrexham Set to Bite

LONDON - European soccer supports a handful of players. mostly in temporary residence in the land of the lire, whose skills non them into millionaires in any, language. Below them the scale descends through thousands who make handsome livings, tens of thousands who earn pittances and millions who play for love.

Every now and then we are stimulated by the fantasy of the game, by the genuine triumph of hope over experience, by those hungry for one night of glory beating aris-tocrats whose bellies are too full. Could Wednesday provide such night? The scent is inevitably lit-tered with false leads, but AS Roma of the Italian billionaire set will surely tremble a little before the kickoff against Wrexham FC, a Welsh club that struggles in the bowels of the Fourth Division across the border in England. Wrexham bes 87th of 92 clubs in that league. It has lost eight of its last nine games. But Wrexham has abeady demonstrated the undercog's bite by eliminating FC Porto, last season's Cup Winners Cup fiplists in the first round.

A more obvious one is Paulo Rome," says Horne, whose educat-ed brain will easily work out that if midfielder has become "emperor" to Roma. It isn't just that Falcan's (swelled by 40 dichard Wrexham $1.5-million two-year deal with fans), as it did in Sunday's league Roma could buy Wrexham lock, match in the Olympic stadium, it stock and barrel. It isn't that his salary is five times the spoils shared by all 13 Wrexham pros. And it has nothing to do with the fact that Wrexham lost £5,000 on the Porto matches and is already down £2,000 for the privilege of setting up their stall in Rome.

No. More to the point is how much a soccer god like Falcao can summon up ambition against opwho, on the stage of their lifetime, will do everything physically possi-ble to deter his flair. By physical I don't necessarily mean foul, but the Wrexham lads are bound to know that Falcao bas played only one league match this season because of, a tender ankle, and are bound to have seen how Falcao little relished slight embarrassment. Wales has the bite in Liverpool's midlield Rome last May .

It is the bite of the underdog that puts fear into Roma and life into Wrexham. Falcao carries the bur-

Seeking Hadrian's Column

Ancient Monument Has Vanished, but Jerusalem Archaeologists

Found a Guard Tower and a Wine Press

By Thomas L. Friedman New York Times Service
ERUSALEM — Io a determined search for tangible evidence of the Roman past in old Jerusalem, Israeli archaeologisis have excavated the main Roman eotry into the Old City and have succeeded in uncarthing a guard tower, the tallest preserved Roman structure in the country.

But the dig that led to these finds was marked as much by frustration as it was by success. And it may well be remembered most for the ingenuity brought to the task — even including a bit of intrigue, an ancient treasure map and the use of laser technology in recreate in spirit at least, some of the past that remains elusive.

The irresistible lure that began it all was a majestic column. In the second century A. D., the Roman Emperor Hadrian erected a huge column apparently topped by a statue of himself in the plaza just inside the main gateway in what was then Roman Jerusalen and what is now known as the Old City. The column served as the visual centerpiece of the walled city, the starting point for measuring all distances in the region and was considered the major architectural feature of Hadrian's Jerusalem, which he called Acolia

Modern archaeologists were aware of the column's existence and its exact placement thanks to a sixth-century mosaic map of the Holy Land that was uncovered years ago in the ruins of a Greek Orthodox church in the tiny Jordanian village of Madaba. The map clearly showed the outline of tall column standing in the plaza just behind the main gate and streets branching out from there in all directions.

Another testimony in the column's existence, and splendor, ts the fact that to this day the main entryway in the Old City, the Turkish-built Damascus Gate, is Turkish-built Damascus Gate, is Still referred 10 by local Arabs as cleared out, Magen and his crew

"Where else in the world can you dig in 1984 oo the basis of a map from the sixth ceotury?" remarked Yitzhak Yaacovy, direc-tor of East Jerusalem Developmeni Ltd., an appendage of the municipality and tourist ministry that was responsible for oversee-fer oot to discuss — a reproduction of the original,

Menahem Magen, an Israeli archaeologist, was commissioned by East Jerusalem Development to excavate the main Roman entryway intn the Old City, which originally consisted of two small archways flanked by a large main gate that was resting directly underneath the "modern" Damascus Gate, through which 10,000 people pass every day.

ing the project

"We knew exactly where the Roman gate was situated thanks in British archaeologists who had uncovered the facade, in the 1930s," said Magen, "But just inside the facade, the gate was completely filled with rubble and concrete that was packed in there by sixth-century Jerusalem, with a the Turks when they were building the Damascus Gate above. We had to work very carefully, pulling out a few feet of dirt, then installing steel supports, then pulling out some more dirt and installing some more supports to make sure that the wall or Damas-decided to continue burrowing, and this led them to a Roman guard lower, also shown on the Madaba map, which stood just to the east of the second-century entryway. The guard tower, too, was filled to the ceiling with rubble

Standing mainly underground at 36 feet (11 meters) tall, 33 feet long and 18 feet wide, the Roman guard tower, now open to tourists, has turned out to be the tailest preserved Roman structure in Israel. Wheo the tower was cleared out, Magen and his crew found a huge stone olive press along with the crushing stone and the catch pit for the manufacture of olive oil. At some point in the Byzantine or early Arab period of Jerusalem's history, around the seventh century, the Roman tower was converted into an olive oil

While the excavations were going on below ground, the Jerusa-lem municipality was busy above ground trying to beautify the Turkish-built Damascus Gate. In particular, they were trying to persuade Arab shopkeepers doing business from cramped quarters in the gateway to move just inside the Old City, where the munici-pality would build them modern

In 1983, while digging the foundations for the new Arab shops, Magen - ever the archaeologist - suggested that they dig "a little deeper" just to see what they might find. What they found was part of the original Roman pavement from the wide plaza that lay just behind the Roman gate and where the main north-south street in the Roman city, also pictured on the Madaba map, began,

"When we realized that the guard inwer and the gate and the plaza were all there, just like on After being told by several the Madaba map, we really start-

With one crew digging from the Roman gate and another digging from below the foundations of the new Arab shops, Magen and his team of workers tried to uncover the plaza and see who would be first to find the column.

Last year the tunnelers met. The spot where the column should have been located was ascertained, bot the column itself was oot there. Not a trace of its existence could be found. 'We don't know where it went," shrugged Yaacovy. "It's a

One of the designers of the Roman gate museum suggested they build a hologram of Hadrian's

A hologram is a photograph of a model recorded on film by a reflected laser beam while being illuminated by a portion of the same laser beam. The result is a three-dimensional, multicolored image that appears on a thin plate of glass almost as though the objeci projected there were inside the glass and could be touched.

In the case of Hadrian's column, the process was even more complicated since most existing holograms measure a few inches in size, whereas East Jerusalem Development wanted "a big one."

companies that such a hologram could oot be produced, Jerusalem officials finally tracked down a company in England, Shadow-scene Ltd., that said it had a laser gun that could make the world's largest hologram, a meter (39 mches) square, and at the reasonable price of $17,000.

Working with local archaeolo gists and the Israel Museum, East Jerusalem Development produced a 1.2-meter scale model of Hadrian's column based on Traian's column, which was built in Rome in A.D. 114, and similar Roman statuary. The figure of Hadrian was recreated from pictures and coins. The model was flown to England and shot with a laser gun, which produced a hologram that is now the centerpiece of the Roman gate museum, opened Oct. 9 by Mayor Kollek. The hologram sits precisely where the column was presumed to have stood centuries ago.

But what did happen to it? "It may have fallen or broken in the major earthquake of 747 A. D.," said Magen. But then, he adds, with the slightest twinkle in his eye, "We did find a crushing stone for an olive press in the guard tower, which was clearly made from a column roughly the size of Hadrian's. I leave it to your imagination. Maybe, maybe . . .
